

ABSTRACT

Aisyah, Hanini. 15.05.111.000.72 The Friendship Portrayed by Dexter and Emma in David Nicholls's One Day. Thesis. English Study Program of Faculty of Social and Cultural Sciences, University of Trunojoyo Madura. Advisor: Prof. Dr. Suryo Tri Saksono M.Pd.

The friendship between Dexter and Emma in David Nicholls's One Day, are interesting to be discussed. This study is aimed to give further understanding about the types of friendship, factors that influence the friendship, and the response for other characters toward their friendship. In this case, this study is focus on the analysis of Dexter and Emma's utterances and as the two main characters and some other characters narration in the novel. This study is used psychology and literature especially friendship theory to analyzed the friendship in the novel.

Because this study is qualitative, the key instrument is the writer herself and the data is described in the form of words. Hence, the data collection has been done synchronously with the data analysis.

The results that were found in this study are; firstly, the types of friendship between Dexter and Emma, the psychological factors that influence their friendship, and the other characters response toward their friendship. Dexter and Emma's friendship is categorized as the type of goodness in friendship which contains some attributes such as; caring, giving with no turn, and long lasting.

Key words: Psychology, Friendship, Type of Friendship

