

ABSTRACT

Qomariyah, Nurul. 2023. An analysis of grammatical and lexical cohesion in undergraduate thesis abstract of english department student at Universitas Trunojoyo Madura. Thesis. English Study Program of Faculty of Social and Cultural Sciences, Universitas Trunojoyo Madura. Advisor: Dr. Masduki, M.Pd

This study is intended to identify the types of grammatical and lexical cohesion in undergraduate thesis abstract and the error found in the use of grammatical cohesion. This study is conducted by applying a qualitative method. The sources of data in this study are 10 theses of undergraduate of english department student at universitas trunojoyo madura. while the data are the sentences from undergraduate thesis abstract. The writer conducted this study by using theory from Halliday and Hasan (1976)

The result of the study shows that there are four types of grammatical cohesion and one type of lexical cohesion which exist in the ten thesis abstract, they are reference (36 data), substitution (25 data), conjunction (46 data), and repetition (4 data). So, the total of grammatical cohesion found in this study were 107 items and lexical cohesion is 4 items. Then, the researcher concluded that the dominant types of grammatical cohesion and lexical cohesion are reference and the conjunction. The lowest frequent of the type is repetition. The researcher has counted the all data manually and accurately.

Keywords: Grammatical cohesion, Lexical cohesion, error