ABSTRACT

Mimesis is contained in literary works, one of which is in the form of novels. Mimesis exists because literary authors get inspiration from what they see in the real world. Phenomena in real life are recorded by authors and then reflected through literature. The aim of this research is to prove that in the novel Majnun by Anton Kurnia there is mimesis and to discover what phenomena exist in the novel Majnun. This research also proves that the other world in Majnun's novel is in accordance with Aristotle's theory of mimesis. This research includes qualitative research. The research object used was the novel Majnun by Anton Kurnia. The data collection techniques used were library, reading and note-taking techniques. The data analysis techniques used include data reduction, data presentation, and drawing conclusions. The research procedures carried out include the preparation stage, research implementation stage, and research reporting. The results of the research carried out found data in the form of mimesis of social phenomena, mimesis of educational phenomena, mimesis of health phenomena and mimesis of religious phenomena.
