

ABSTRACT

The political rights revocation is a kind of criminal sanction that is intended to give a fair punishment to the corruptors. The punishment existence of right of selected revocation as a representative nowadays becomes an interesting issue for the criminal law experts and the others who consider that political right revocation as a punishment is incompatible with Human Rights.

The disputation about right selected revocation as a representative (political rights revocation) that happens today becomes the attention of media and judge to decide the corruption cases which is happening today. There are two mainstreams that appear in the discussion about the existence of political right revocation to the corruptors. A group that wants to delete the whole political right revocation and a group that wants to defend the political right revocation based on the stipulation of prevailed positive law. The suspicion that political right revocation breaks the human rights has a right to nominate themselves to occupy an election and official, political right get a legal protection and no one can to break it.

In principle, there is a collateral of protection upon the human rights in the state of law and it is an equipment which appears from values, then becomes a norm that regulate the human behavior in each other relation. It means that the collateral of human rights protection in the state of law, like political rights which in that sense is chooses and being chosen in public occupation, especially in Indonesia must be used by appreciating human right to life. Anything that is defined and formulated with human rights, that phenomenon is still a kind of manifestation of the existed values.
